Chapter 1 by StealthWriter23

It was the first day at my new school, of course, I was extremely nervous. I like to think that most people would be nervous about going to this specific school, The School of the Arts, I know what you are thinking, it's just another performing arts school, but it's not. It actually isn't even much of a PERFORMING arts school, just a school with a lot of different paintings and sculptures, but there is something really special about this school.

The thing that makes it special is the actual people that go to this school. I guess that you could say that they were all special. By the way, my name is Celeste Garthrow, and obviously, I go to TSA High, i'm 17 years old and I already surprisingly already live at my own apartment. (My parents are always concerned about nothing) Anyway, any student that has EVER gone to this school, had a gift, I guess that's really the only way to put it. My gift? Well, it's a little crazy, but, I can control molecules. I know that you probably think that it's amazing to be able to do what I do, but it's actually pretty difficult to use it in the right way. But along with that, Me and pretty much everyone else at this school are afraid of the power that they have.
